Indigenous Health Topics

Any applicant for the Gerry Murphy Prize who is presenting a topic relating to Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander peoples' health or Hauora Māori and/or presenting on an Indigenous health and wellbeing topic, must ensure that:

1. they have clearly designated this in their abstract and acknowledge this during the presentation

2. describe the nature of the contributions of Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander or Māori individuals and/or committees such as co- authorship of the abstract and joint research leadership
3. provide an additional 50-word paragraph at the end of their abstract for consideration for the Gerry Murphy Prize, which outlines how Indigenous Data Sovereignty, community engagement, co-design and/or Te Tiriti o Waitangi have been taken into account.

Any abstract that the AFPHM Council considers to be related to Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander peoples' health or Hauora Māori that has not been clearly designated as such may be rejected from consideration for the Gerry Murphy Prize without further correspondence. Supervisors may be contacted in this instance.
